In the finding of fact the Court declared that the same day the mutiny took place the Chilian Minister requested permission from the executive power of the Republic to send the wounded to some hospital of the city, and to place the prisoners under guard at the disposal of the Collector of the fort. The Pilcomayo had been relieved of her armament and the necessary space to care for the wounded and secure the prisoners was wanting. The President of the Republic, indging it was a duty of humanity and courtesty, acceded to the request and placed certain facilities at the disposal of the Minister of Chili for the term of three days, which was a literwards extended to the deposal of the Minister of Chili for the term of three days, which was a literwards extended to the deposal of the Minister of Chili for the term of three days, which was a literwards extended to the deposal of the Minister of Chili for the term of three days, which was a literwards extended to the courtest that the disposal of the Collector of the city, and the product of the rainment and the product train got beyond control of the trainment and dashing down the grade at a fear-ful rate of speed, was piled up and smashed into kindling wood at a curve on the side of a deep ravine about three miles north of Bellwood.

been laid before the judiciary arm of the Government.

All the incidents of the case, the Court declared, conduced necessarily to establish that all the sheeds committed by the prisoners which gave occasion for their imprisonment were committed to an enl essentially political and for the sole purpose of giving aid and co-operation to the political party which had arisen in arms and was actually in war awainst the downwent of Chrit.

The offense of the prisoners, therefore, said the Court, is "simply an intraction of political order and their offenses were infractions of order and their offenses were infractions of order and acts of insurrection and hostility against the Rate of which they were citizens and whose flag the ship carried. Further, if those offenses involved any infraction of any other character—if they compromised, for example, general military discipline, that fact does not change their status nor are the priso ere destrived of their principle and proper attributes as political effects, because such infractions are but the natural accompanies of the action taken with a Dolliteal end.

The Court laid down the broad proposition that in the treatment of political offenesthe spirit of the written law of the country and the principles universally consecrated in international law "established as an invariable rule the involability of all political variable rule the involability of all political comminates when once there have deviable pure an of the country against which their offenses have been comminated and pince the authors of such infenses under the moral guarantee of the contrast to the format the first offenses under the moral guarantee of the contrast to the part of the public National law and which its rule of justice, of humanity and of politics, which make part of the public National law and which is not found to act of the civilized work, and the various members of the royal family, were efficacy which is not found to act of the defeat of Maxwell by the Directory may legislation or in provisions of a treaty.

These principles must prevail, the Court held, in international random or existing to a lord the same of war of all forces; which is not found to act of the principles of extertions or civil, it is unformity taught in this respect that only is virtue of the principle of extertions are civil, it is unformity taught in the particular strate. The Court resilirins the doctrine, even in its application to evil wars, that "the neatern's trail state that all eschein with its public force to main taching their stay in its eleritory takes an indirect part in the war and commiss a flaurant violation of neutrality," and that "the right first as neutrality," and the right first as neutrality, and the right first as neutrality in the store and chinciples i gentlemen prominent in both military and civil life.

The graduates, escaled by the Corps of Calets, arrived on the grounds at about 10.30 o'clock. Thereupon Col, Wilson, the Superintendent of the Academy, introduced Rev. Mr. Postlethwate, the Chaptain of the Military Academy, who offered a prayer. Congressman Burrows, of the Board of Visitors, then addressed the graduates.

When Mr. Burrows had concluded his remarks the Secretary was introduced. In the course of his speech he paved a feeling compliment to the memory of Gen. Sherman, "I can say," he declared, "nothing better to young soldiers to day than to commend to them the life of this great a dder and citizen as one in every way worthy of imitation." He quoted some of Sherman memorable words of patrionsm, notably those in his letter resigning the position of Superintendent of the Louisiana Military Academy, in which he said he would stand by the old Government of the United States while a fragment of it remained.

The distribution of diplomas was then proceeded with. The parchiments were handed to the graduates by Secretary Proctor. When the name of Cody, who graduated number one, was called, there was loud applause. Secretary Proctor said: "Mr. Cosby, the whole country knows what it is to graduate from the Military Academy at the head of a class. I congratulate you."
